The Origin of Memorial Day

It may be interesting to the readers of the "Observer" to know that "Memof the "Observer" to know that "Memorial Day," now observed throughout the North and the South, had its origin in Columbus, Mississippi, on April 25, 1866. The following poem was inspired by an incident which occurred there, the "inland river" being the Tombigbee, upon whose banks the beautiful little city is situated:

The Blue and the Gray

By the flow of the inland river, Whence the fleets of iron have fled, Where the blades of the grave-grass

Aslesp are the ranks of the dead; Under the sod and the dew, Waiting the judgment day: Under the one, the Blue; Under the other, the Gray,

These in the robings of glory, Those in the gloom of defeat. All with the battle blood gory, In the dusk of eternity meet; Juder the sod and the dew. Waiting the judgment day: Juder the laurel, the Blue;

Under the willow, the Gray

From the silence of sorrowful hours. The desolate mourners go, Lovingly Inden with flowers
Alike for the friend and the foe;
Under the sod and the dew

Waiting the judgment day: Under the roses, the Blue; Under the lillies, the Gray.

So with an equal splendor So with an equal splendor
The morning sunrays fall,
With a touch impartially tender,
On the blossoms blooming for all;
Under the sod and the dew.
Waiting the judgment day:
Broidered with gold, the Blue;
Mellowed with gold, the Gray.

So when the summer calleth
On forest and field of grain,
With an equal murmur falleth
The cooling drip of the rain:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day:
Wet with the rain, the Blue;
Wet with the rain, the gray.

Wet with the rain, the gray. Sadly, but not with upbraiding. The generous deed was done; In the storm of the years that in the storm of the years that fading

No braver battle was won;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day;
Under the blossoms, the Blue;
Under the garlands, the Gray.

No more shall the war-cry sever, Or the winding rivers be red;
They banish our anger forever
When they laurel the graves of ou dead.

Under the sod and the dew,

Waiting the judgment day:
Love and tears for the Blue;
Tears and love for the Gray.
—By Francis Miles Finch.
Referring to a history of Columbus.
Mississippi, by Dr. W. L. Lipscomb, I find this statement:

"In the spring of 1866 three ladies of Columbus were in the habit of visit-ing Friendship Cemetery and of clearing off as best they could the weeds and briars, and decorating with flowers the graves of the Confederate dead. "This beautiful custom, inaugurated by them, found a hearty respons in the breasts of the ladies of Colum bus, and resulted in a determination to make the decoration of the soldiers graves an annual occurrence. The first celebration took place April 25

"The 'Columbus Index' of April 26, gives an account as follows: 'The procession of yesterday, in honor the matrons, dressed in mourning, and bearing flowers in their hands. . . . Lastly came the carriages bear-ing elderly ladies. Arriving at the emetery, the ladies assembled around

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly falling to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohlo, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. The "Index" further comments upon the spirit which instigated this magnanimous act and states that it was at the suggestion of "a lady—one of the sweetest women with whom God ever blessed the earth—who vol-God ever blessed the earth—who vol-unteered, of her own mind, to strew flowers upon the Federal graves. . . . It is not improper to state that this good woman lost a gallant husband in the Confederate Causei, himself a

Grace Augusta Ogden of Atlanta, the little granddaughter of Mrs. Augusta Cox, to whose spirit such tribute is paid, heard for the first time rute is paid, heard for the first test a rumor of this episode and wrote to have it substantiated. The reply, in the daintiest tracery, of a generation part, lies before me, and is in part as "Just after the first decoration of our Confederate soldiers' graves, I was on the committee with a dear friend, Miss Matt Morton; and we had a large quantity of flowers in excess of what we needed for our own dead. The graves of the Federal soldiers backed so bare and desolate, I said to my friend, 'Let us drop a flower on each of their graves for their mothers' of their graves for their mothers sakes; each mound represents some mother's durling.' She respondet cheerfully, so we led off, followed by a few, but now it has become a custom to remember, the 'Blue and the Gray', and we know Jesus would have us for the contract of th give as we hope to be forgiven. He loved everyone and we are to follow his example or we cannot be His dis-

"This was a long time ago, but how good God is in allowing me to tell one of my own dear grandchildren; and surely it is easier for you to forgive who know only through others of the horrors of war. Let us strive to forget the past and remember that "God is love."

'God is love.'"
So this brave little woman, who buried the love of her young life with a Confederate soldier, and turned to drop a flower on the grave of a fallen foe, still lives, a silver-haired, great grandmother, to inculcate lessons of peace and forgiving love in the hearts of the fourth generation.—G. A. O., in the Christian Observer.

TOWN AND COUNTRY, CO-OPERATE

The average middle-west town is not a complete unit without the coun-try which surrounds it. They are parts of one unit. Either without the other will fail to do its work well. An occasional Fourth of July celebration, street fair, or similar wholebraton, street fair, or similar wholesale getting together, is not the kind of co-operation which alone will bring the parts of this unit into the best working harmony. Each must help the other in solving the problems of the whole unit. The town must not Stainback, and, following it, a fervent prayer by Rev. A. S. Antrews. The ladies then performed the beautiful and touching duty of decorating the graves with flowers. . . We were glad to see that no distinction was made between our own dead and about forty Federal soldiers who sleep their last sleep beside them. The buying and selling department of this unit of town and surrounding country territory is just as importan and just as truly productive as are the fields and pastures in which corn. oats, wheat, and hogs are produced for home use or for market. The old idea that only the farmer and miner idea that only the farmer and miner really produce anything, and that those who buy and sell for gain are more parasites, has been exploded and we know now that the banker and storekeeper, the railroad and steamship and the manufacturer and jobber, are just as productive as any of the other producers if their work is economically handled. It is poor business policy for any of these useful members of society to sneer at any other, or to refuse co-operation for the common good. the common good.

Judge Harry Gals this week offered the Tribune his wheat crop for $1.00 But we have not taken him up on his offer. The Hessian fly has practically ruined the wheat in this county and many have already plowed up their crop and put in corn. This is going to burt the farmers considerably as they were expecting a bumper crop this year while the price is high.—Fredericktown Tribune.

A health code for the smaller cities of Missouri, similar to codes that have proved successful in operation in other States, has been prepared by R. C. Journey, director of the municipal Reference Bureau of the University of Missouri at Columbia.

A board of health, appointed by the Mayor for two years, would consist of members of the city council, practicing physicians, a bacterologist and the sanitary inspector as a member ex ing physicians, a bacterologist and the sanitary inspector as a member ex officio. It would be the duty of the board to keep the council posted on the sanitary conditions of the city and to aid the inspector in the enforcement of the health regulations.
